NAGALAND UNIVERSITY
HQRS: LUMAMI

The Department of Political Science joined hands with billions of people on earth to celebrate International Women's Day, 2018 on the theme "Time is Now: Rural and Urban Activists Transforming Women's Lives". To mark the occasion, a brainstorming session was organized to dwell upon the position and status of women in our society in particular and in the world in general.

The participants highlighted the importance of creating a social structure where women are honored, their rights and dignity protected and enabling environment is created in which they become the agents for social, cultural, economic and political change.

The participants appreciated the Prime Minister's flagship programme 'Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao' to save and educate the girl child, to become equal partners in the task of nation building.

The programme was chaired by Miss Neizhanuo Golmei and the theme of the International Women's day of 2018 was highlighted by Prof. A.K.Singh. This was followed by the sharing of thoughts and ideas by the Research Scholars and students of the Department. The concluding remarks were given by Dr.Moamenla Amer.
